VARSITY FOOTBALL

The big Thanksgiving day football game, between the Universities of Idaho and Utah, has taken a back seat as far as the football interest at the university goes. The cause behind this sudden change is the announcement that the faculty proposes to enter the Hmelight in a big game with the game just before the Christmas holidays, so that they would have the two weeks of vacation in which to wear the last of their out of their systems. The students would stand for that, however, and so the next Thanksgiving game, which was held at the University of Utah, was postponed to the following day.

The faculty team will be chosen from the following "martyrs": Maddock, who will have difficulty keeping his team on the field; Reynolds and Polaris, who claim that they once played football, and will form the backbone of the team; and Cummings, who expect to start the game as ends. Pearson, Vase, Redger and Ebaugh, who will play each other in the backfield, and Young, Porter, Merrill, King and Hiltz, who think that their shortcomings will be less noticeable in the middle of the line.

High School Football

Thursday afternoon was the first time in three weeks that the first time team has done any scrimmage work, but the practice cleared several points that were doubtful in the minds of the coaches. A picked bunch of scrubs lined up against the team, and for over an hour the scrubs bucked the line and attempted to break through the line. The team held the entire time, and not once during the practice did they make their yards. After a scrimmage, the team went through a hard physical practice, and then a hard physical practice.

The men who will take the trip have not yet been chosen, as competition for the position is still open. Especially for the subs. Three subs will be taken, if possible, an extra one, as the last trip, the chance in climate and altitude might cause more changes during the game than at first expected.

Manager Stout has nearly everything ready for the team and is now waiting for train time.

Driscoll Is Liked

That Jim Driscoll, of the Artell will meet before Coffroth's athletic club on New Year's day is more than likely. The feathers have been offered a big purse and the only hitch is the weight question. The fact that Driscoll is a light weight, Driscoll is a light weight, Driscoll is a light weight.

Interest in Middleweights

The daily tramping of Papke and Ketchel is being watched with great interest by fans all over the country. At the present time Papke weighs 155 pounds and Ketchel tips the beam at 157. Papke is building up and Ketchel is losing weight. In another year Ketchel will be a heavy-weight while Papke, as far as weight is concerned, will remain about the same.

"NON-PARTISAN" MEETING OF CITIZENS TO NOMINATE A SCHOOL TRUSTEE

Editor Tribune: Last Wednesday evening, November 18, 1938, I had the pleasure and privilege of looking in upon the "non-partisan, non-sectarian" meeting of the citizens in the Ninth ward annex. The occasion was most educational and, for much to my astonishment, the time of this non-partisan, non-sectarian meeting was devoted mainly to a discussion of partisanship and sectarianism. The debate waxed warm, and it kept waxing warmer and warmer; in fact, it got hot.

The words "church" and "party" were so often uttered that it became more obvious all the time that this was, indeed, a meeting which should serve all future generations as a great lesson in non-partisanship. The climax of this splendid, non-partisan gathering was reached when Bishop Iverson, in seconding the nomination of Mr. Martin for member of the school board, stated that Judge Van Pelt, who had also been placed in nomination, had been flirting with the American party, and, if I had not been convinced before, upon hearing that unimpeachable evidence of the non-partisan character of this remarkable gathering, as it was the tremendous applause and approval by the audience of that declaration.

If I had not been convinced before, upon hearing that unimpeachable evidence of the non-partisan character of this remarkable gathering, as it was the tremendous applause and approval by the audience of that declaration. I became thoroughly convinced that the meeting was, indeed, thoroughly non-partisan. But although the climax had been reached, it was for an elderly gentleman, the rear of which hall, to put the finishing touches on that climax by assuring the gathering that Mr. Van Pelt was not an American, that he had never voted the American ticket, and that, in fact, he was entirely above suspicion; although it was difficult for any one not understanding the peculiar conditions that prevail in this locality to understand why membership in the American party, or in any party, should be a disqualification for nomination by such a non-partisan gathering.

It is wonderful how the non-partisan spirit is permeating and saturating this community. At the recent election, many of our good Mormon Democrats ardently espoused the cause of the Republican party in order to defeat the American party, a party whose only fault consists in a demand of obedience to law and constitution. In the approaching school election, no doubt, our good Mormon Democrats will again combine in a spirit of brotherly love with the Republicans for the purpose of injuring the American party, and, doubtless, in our next municipal campaign, we shall behold the spectacle of another group of non-partisan combination and conglomeration in the shape of a citizens' ticket, which will have for its sole purpose the defeat of the American party.
